To whom it may concern,

I am the Unity & Unreal team leader at HISPlayer. It has been my pleasure to work with Stiven Arias Giraldo for 2 years while he held the position as software engineer. Stiven started as an intern and continuously grew his skills, showing huge motivation and effort which became a very valuable member of the team.

Stiven is a key member in our Unity SDK development. He had a huge role in designing and maintaining the architecture of our product while continuously solving issues from our customer. He showed his skill in Unity game engine development with C# programming, and also the ability to learn multi-platforms development including Android, iOS, macOS, visionOS, Windows and WebGL using different programming languages such as Java, C++, Objective-C, Swift and javascript.

Aside from software development, Stiven is a very organized engineer. All the tasks are well written in a structured JIRA ticket that allows other team members to easily track the development process. He also continuously updated our product documentation to maintain our product quality. He was always actively communicating with other team members which makes him a very good team player.

Even after his experience in HISPlayer, he is still eager to learn and pursue his career. I strongly recommend Stiven Arias Giraldo for his future work experience in software and game development.

Sincerely,

Ivan Derianto,
Unity & Unreal Team Leader at HISPlayer
